

Inter Pipeline Fund Announces January 2010 Cash Distribution

CALGARY, ALBERTA, January 7, 2010: Inter Pipeline Fund (“Inter Pipeline”) (TSX: IPL.UN) announced today the declaration of a cash distribution of $0.075 per unit for January 2010. This distribution will be paid on or about February 16th to unitholders of record on January 22nd, 2010.

Inter Pipeline believes it is well positioned to maintain its current level of cash distributions to unitholders through 2011 and beyond, despite becoming a taxable entity. This view is based on Inter Pipeline’s continuing strong financial performance, attractive fundamentals in each of its business segments and expected increases in cash flow following completion of the Corridor expansion project and other organic growth projects currently under development.

It is also important to note that once Inter Pipeline becomes a taxable entity in 2011, cash distributions will receive more favourable tax treatment than is currently the case. Today the vast majority of Inter Pipeline’s cash distributions are classified as business or interest income for tax purposes. Distributions paid after January 1, 2011 will generally be treated as eligible Canadian dividends, resulting in a lower effective tax rate in the hands of a taxable investor. For example, using 2009 enacted tax rates, a Canadian resident in the highest marginal tax bracket would have their effective tax rate on taxable distributions reduced by approximately 18% to 25% depending on their province of residence. This more favourable tax treatment will apply to the taxable portion of Inter Pipeline’s distributions, excluding a minor amount of interest income sourced from foreign operations.

Investors should be advised that income tax rates are continually subject to future legislative changes, and unitholders are advised to consult their own tax advisors regarding tax-related matters.

With Inter Pipeline becoming a taxable entity in 2011, the board of directors has conducted a process to investigate the advantages and disadvantages of changing its corporate structure. In evaluating alternative structures, the board considered possible impacts including income tax rates, corporate conversions costs, counterparty consent issues and the sustainability of Inter Pipeline’s cash distributions. Upon completion of its process, the board concluded that changing Inter Pipeline’s structure would yield no tangible benefits to unitholders and significant costs could be incurred. As a result, Inter Pipeline will remain structured as a publicly traded limited partnership into the foreseeable future. The board of directors will continue to monitor future events which could affect this decision.
